I. Letter From The CEO

I'd like to welcome you to Palomar's first annual sustainability and citizenship report.

For some of you, this will be an introduction to Palomar and our business. Our mission is to leverage data, technology, and the expertise of our people to provide a range of insurance solutions to Americans, many of whom have been historically underserved by the industry. These include families and small businesses who turn to Palomar for insurance against a range of natural disasters, from fire to flood to earthquake. We are proud to provide these Americans with peace of mind, and, when the worst happens, the tools with which to rebuild their homes, businesses, and lives.

Our company's success is the byproduct of people working together toward a common set of objectives. At the end of the day, our most important assets are the 101 men and women who comprise the Palomar team, and 2020 has been a difficult year for them and for all Americans. The health, well-being, and safety of our team members has always come first, and this guiding principle has shaped our response to the unprecedented environment that we continue to navigate during the COVID-19 pandemic.

This report highlights the Palomar workforce in two sections: 'Why We Work' is an expression of the company's values-driven approach to problem solving, and the care with which we treat each other in the workplace. 'How We Work' highlights the steps that Palomar has taken to invest in our people and manage a workplace built on ethical behavior, compassion, and productivity. I believe that a values-driven workplace will help Palomar find new market opportunities, service our policyholders, and enhance our financial performance.

Like many companies, we moved quickly to a remote work plan to ensure the physical safety of our teammates at the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic. We have a cloud-based operating and technology infrastructure and a specialization in disaster response that enabled a seamless pivot to a remote work environment. I am pleased that this aggressive approach has kept our team members safe and healthy without compromising productivity in any way. No definition of health, however, is complete without addressing mental health and wellness. The stress and anxiety associated with the COVID-19 pandemic and the racial, civil, and social unrest in our nation exact an unseen toll on the mental health of millions of Americans. At Palomar, we have created new channels for team member communication, provided valuable tools and performed mental health check-ins with all our team members. We refer to Palomar as a family, and in tough times families look out for one another. I am pleased to note that internal surveys indicate our regular interventions and engagements have done just that, creating a stronger, more unified workplace amid unprecedented uncertainty.

I am very proud of our response to the COVID-19 pandemic as well as our employees' commitment to our customers during a challenging time.

Our rapid and caring response to the COVID-19 pandemic also speaks to our culture more broadly. As a company, we believe that we have a responsibility to not only our shareholders but also the environment and our local communities in which we work and live. While Palomar's carbon and environmental footprint might be smaller than larger companies with extensive supply chains and manufacturing infrastructure, we believe every company, regardless of size or industry, should commit to responsible environmental stewardship and sustainability. We have and will continue to take steps to reduce our carbon footprint, preserve our natural resources through responsible power and water management and communicate our support for a more sustainable American future. As leaders in risk management for hurricanes, floods, fires and other disasters exacerbated by climate change, we see an opportunity to lead our industry and partner with private and public constituents on matters that lead to a more robust chain of financial and infrastructural disaster response and support. We believe these efforts will ultimately lead to sustainability. We acknowledge the reality of climate change and are taking steps to reduce our internal footprint and resource usage as well as provide external solutions and support.

As part of our ethic of partnership and our interest in economic and social justice, Palomar will be allocating up to $10 million to open accounts with minority-owned Broadway Federal Bank. We look forward to reporting back to you on this new partnership and the impact on economic opportunity and wealth generation.

Lastly, Palomar is making several commitments to environmental stewardship and best practices in business through our People and Talent Programs. In future years, we will report back on our progress in meeting and exceeding those commitments. I invite your feedback on our goals and our business practices, because dialogue with all our stakeholders – including you – will help us grow, thrive and meet the challenges of tomorrow.

Mac Armstrong

II. Company Overview

Palomar is a rapidly growing and profitable company focused on the provision of specialty property insurance. We focus on markets that we believe are underserved by other insurance companies, such as those for earthquake, wind, and flood insurance, and protect both individuals and businesses against loss. Palomar uses proprietary data analytics and a modern technology platform to offer our customers flexible products with customized and granular pricing on an admitted and excess and surplus basis. We distribute our products through multiple channels, including retail agents, program administrators, wholesale brokers, and in partnership with other insurance companies. Our product suite and differentiated distribution network allows Palomar to capture market share and drive adoption in esoteric specialty property insurance segments and are also illustrative of our entrepreneurial and agile culture. We pride ourselves on this agility which we expect will help us open and develop new markets as we execute our strategic plan. Lastly, our business strategy is supported by a comprehensive risk transfer program that we believe provides both consistency of earnings and appropriate levels of financial protection in the event of major catastrophes.

- Established the Environmental, Social and Corporate Governance (ESG) Committee of the board of directors in October 2020

IV. Why We Work

Palomar's culture is built on finding innovative solutions to complicated problems. For instance, early in our history we observed that certain insurance products such as earthquake or flood protection were either deficient or unaffordable to millions of Americans. To solve that problem, Palomar developed deep subject matter expertise in these markets and leveraged data and technology platforms to create more accurate and consistent risk measures for American homes, businesses, and communities. As a result, more Americans have access to affordable insurance products that protect their homes and property from not only earthquakes, but a variety of other natural disasters.

Earthquake coverage is just one example of how Palomar challenges conventional wisdom and applies new tools to solve perennial problems. We do the same for customers who turn to Palomar for a range of commercial and residential catastrophe insurance products; products that remain responsive to the changing needs of policyholders and the exposures they face. As the nature of work evolves every day, Palomar sees great opportunity in helping to build more resilient workplaces.

In so doing, Palomar plays a role in supporting America's resiliency in the face of natural and man-made disasters. Our vision is that every American who needs coverage should have it, and we are hard at work developing products that address unmet or underserved needs. We further believe that business, government, and society should partner to create an unbreakable chain that supports resilience and ultimately prosperity in every American community. Palomar's pledge is that we will be a catalyst for partnerships that recognize our inter-dependence and provide greater support for Americans in need. As Palomar launches a new excess and surplus insurance company and expands our activities to cover all the United States, we are now in a prime position to execute against this goal.

V. How We Work

Palomar's greatest resource is its people. A workforce-centric approach to productivity and performance helps ensure that we continue to attract and retain outstanding talent who feel fully invested in our collective mission. At Palomar, we are committed to diversity and inclusion in all facets of the organization. We have built an open culture that celebrates the diversity of our workforce and we have created internal processes that will enable us to build upon this core strength. We believe that diversity yields greater creativity and productivity, helps us serve our customers and partners more effectively, and ultimately returns greater value to our shareholders and to the communities in which we do business.

Learning and Development

Palomar encourages all of its team members to take advantage of company-supported training and learning opportunities that help broaden industry and functional knowledge to help them excel in their current roles as well as advance their overall career objectives. We believe in the dynamic allocation of talent, and therefore we encourage interested team members to explore functions outside their current roles. To support this belief, we provide a $3,000 tuition and/or certification reimbursement for ongoing development.

Lastly, we have a methodical approach to talent development, offering organizational advancement and mentoring services to all deserving team members regardless of position or title.

Diversity, Inclusion, Community Engagement and Equality

Following the racial, civil, and social unrest that gripped America in the summer months, Palomar created a DICE Council (Diversity, Inclusion, Community Engagement, and Equality), a team member-led effort that advises company leadership on initiatives and best practices in this important area. The Council developed a charter statement that has been embraced by the entire company:

“At Palomar, we are committed to diversity, equality, and inclusion in all facets of the organization. We have built an open culture that celebrates the diversity of our workforce, while actively championing equality and inclusion practices that make us a company people want to work with and work for.

We believe that diversity, equality, and inclusion yield greater organizational creativity and productivity, which helps us serve our customers and partners more effectively. Delivering on our diversity commitment returns greater value to our shareholders and ultimately makes a positive impact to the communities in which we do business and to the people who live in them.”

DIVERSITY – At Palomar, we are not all the same. We celebrate our differences, and we identify opportunities for increased innovation and collaboration amongst diverse teams with diverse perspectives.

INCLUSION – At Palomar, we appreciate and take pride in the active involvement of every team member’s unique contribution within a culture that harmonizes our differences. Our team members understand their important contribution to the greater team and understand that what they do makes a difference, both for the company, and in the larger communities we serve.

COMMUNITY & ENGAGEMENT – Palomar’s commitment to diversity, equality, and inclusion extends into the communities where we conduct business. We believe that every organization, regardless of size or scope, can make a meaningful difference on issues of community welfare, justice and equality. Through our social, personal, and professional networks, we champion our values and actions. We partner with like-minded organizations to drive action and positive change.

EQUALITY – Palomar promotes a work environment where individuals are treated fairly, respectfully, and have equal access to resources and opportunities for growth. We encourage our teammates to share ideas and collaborate to remove organizational boundaries, solve problems, and drive company growth.

This is not simply a question of business and productivity – it is a question of values. Following the unrest which swept America after the tragic and senseless killing of George Floyd in Minneapolis and so many others, we decided to communicate Palomar’s values to our team members – 9% of whom live in the Twin Cities area. Our CEO, Mac Armstrong, wrote the following:

“...We believe this is an important opportunity for all leaders to demonstrate our values in an effort to heal the country and build a more just society. Chief executives need to prioritize processes that yield a better understanding of the fears and concerns of our co-workers. We must provide team members with forums with which to communicate these emotions. It’s not only urgently needed in the wake of COVID-19, economic dislocation and social unrest, it’s also good business that will strengthen the bonds between colleagues.”

In addition, June 19 is Juneteenth, a holiday commemorating the end of slavery in the United States. African-Americans have celebrated it since the late 1800s and this day should be celebrated by all Americans. In June 2020, all team members were granted an opportunity to celebrate Juneteenth and starting in 2021 and all years thereafter, Juneteenth will be a Company holiday and employees will receive paid time off.

Community and Well-Being

In the wake of the political unrest, Palomar made a financial contribution to the Center for Policing Equity, the nation’s top non-profit addressing racial inequities in policing and law enforcement. We also asked our team members to select a non-profit focusing on economic recovery and social justice and made a small contribution to each of those organizations in their name.

Palomar is proud to offer team members a comprehensive and leading benefits program that includes a holistic approach to health and wellness. We regularly benchmark programs to ensure our team has access to industry-leading benefits to address all aspects of well-being — physical and mental health, family care, financial support, and community engagement. These programs, along with constant dialogue with team members, have helped us address the myriad challenges of 2020 as a community, maintaining productivity, and strengthening the bonds between us.

VI. Our Commitments

In this report, Palomar is making several specific commitments as part of our ongoing dedication to the environment, health and safety, corporate social responsibility, corporate governance, and sustainability. We have established a newly appointed ESG committee of our board of directors. The committee will be led by Palomar CEO Mac Armstrong and board members Daryl Bradley and Martha Notaras, and they will be responsible for holding the Company and management accountable for our ESG initiatives.

Additionally, our annual sustainability reports will identify goals that Palomar will look to achieve and report back to you on our progress. Palomar is committed to responsible investing and to incorporating environmental, social and corporate governance considerations into the Company's investment strategy and execution. Our fixed maturity investment portfolio is managed by Conning and Company, an investment advisory firm that is an experienced manager of insurance company assets. Conning integrates ESG risk factors into its research process and assigns proprietary ESG ratings to its issuer coverage universe. Since 2012, Conning has been a signatory to the United Nations Principles for Responsible Investment, a global standard for responsible investing. In 2020, the UN PRI assigned an 'A+' score to Conning for its approach to ESG Strategy and Governance. In addition to incorporating ESG factors into its credit ratings and underwriting, Conning, along with Palomar management, monitors Palomar's investment portfolio for holdings with ESG concerns, including high-risk fossil fuel assets, to review for divestiture.
